SERVICE TEAM EXPANDS

Gas Combustion Engineering Specialist Joins Service Team

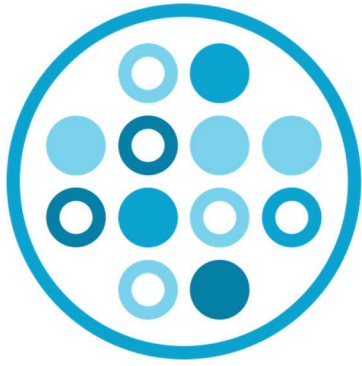

Sci-Lab Analytical, exclusive UK dealer for ELTRA® analysers and Alpha Resources® consumables, is pleased to announce Nathan Horrabin has joined Sci-Lab's service team as a service engineer. This brings the UK service team to four full-time professionals with a combined service experience of over 65 years.

"Hiring Nathan is part of Sci-Lab's on-going commitment to supporting service needs for UK labs with analysers. Nathan's experience with OEM organic analysis equipment is a good fit with our growth of Alpha Resources organic consumables," notes Keir Hague, Sales & Service Manager for Sci-Lab. "With the Sci-Lab service team, you get the benefit of our engineers' OEM experience and factory training coupled with the convenience of a UK-based service team. This also results in service pricing that is significantly below OEM service charges with less downtime and the same - if not better - quality results."

Nathan has more than 10 years of experience as a service engineer, including eight with a major OEM, and trained as an electrical inspector. He specializes in gas combustion analysers in carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, and sulfur; and has extensively collaborated with academic customers to develop and improve sample applications. Nathan has worked across the UK and Europe training customer in basic and advanced gas combustion analysis classes. He is experienced with both hardware and software service engineering for multiple analyser product lines.

Sci-Lab's service team offers support by telephone, internet, e-mail or in-person to ensure the longevity of systems and reduce downtime as far as possible. The Sci-Lab service team are specialists in ELTRA® and LECO® analysers with a working knowledge of other brands. Additional information about Sci-Lab Analytical and their services may be found on the website, <https://sci-lab.co.uk>.
